PEACE THROUGH MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING

People came from around the world to build Cleveland into the fifth largest city in the United States by 1920. New arrivals continue to energize Cleveland in the 21st Century. The Cleveland Cultural Gardens have honored the dreams and accomplishments of these generations for more than 100 years.

Today, almost 40 gardens welcome everyone to enjoy peaceful Rockefeller Park and to appreciate the tapestry of cultures in Northeast Ohio. The green space stretches almost two miles along Martin Luther King Jr. and East boulevards, leading from the lakefront to the famous cultural institutions around University Circle.

The gardens began in 1916 with a monument to William Shakespeare, which grew into the British Cultural Garden. Unique gardens were added to celebrate the early 20th Century's large immigrant groups from Italy, Poland, Germany, Hungary and elsewhere. More recent gardens highlight the cultural contributions of people from Asia, Africa and the Middle East.

Each garden is developed and maintained by a sponsoring organization, such as a heritage association, museum or church. The gardens feature peaceful fountains and flowers, along with symbolic monuments to the artists, scientists and leaders that have inspired their culture.

The Cleveland Cultural Gardens Federation promotes all of these features so that all people may enjoy peace through mutual understanding.

ONE WORLD DAY

Across eight decades, this colorful extravaganza has showcased food, music and dance from across the world. A Parade of Flags features generations of cultural pride, and a naturalization ceremony welcomes new citizens to the U.S. The streets close and food trucks assemble for this annual event so that tens of thousands of people can celebrate how many different cultures contribute to our American community.

Follow our One World Day and Cleveland Cultural Gardens accounts on social media for the latest programming and schedules.
